

Traditional Tales: Persuasive Texts

Below, you'll find three persuasive texts from different traditional tales.
Can you work out which traditional tales they come from?

Kon-Krete

You're about to build your own home but have you thought about what you're going to build it with?

Usually, people in this town build their houses with whatever they can find lying around. If that's straw, sticks or even bricks, none of these can provide you with the safety that Kon-Krete can.

Kon-Krete is completely huff and puff proof which means that your house can never be blown down. Kon-Krete also makes it easier than ever to build your own home. Simply stick the Kon-Krete bricks together in a house shape. Then, enjoy your new home.

To All Trip-Trappers...

To all trip-trappers,

I am writing this letter to beg you to stop walking across my bridge. How would you like it if you were woken up by people stamping on your roof? It's not nice.

As a troll, I can either live in a cave or I can live under a bridge. I don't enjoy being in a small space so underneath a bridge is the best choice for me. However, the noise of people trip-trapping across my bridge is just too much.

I understand that you need to cross this river. However, why don't you just use the other bridge? It's only four metres away and it is much safer. It even takes you to a prettier part of the field! Surely, that makes it a better choice?

Please stop walking across my bridge. I need to sleep and there's a much better bridge only metres away.

Yours faithfully, Mr T Roll.
